

Mr . Clark was a prominent mining man in the area of Tonopah. He had been active in mine development in this section of Nevada for 30 years. He was the discoverer of the Clarkdale and the New Deal Mine of the Tonopah Divide District. Mr. Clark was injured in a mine accident a year and a half before his death and had been under medical care since that time. He had gone to California for a time to see if the warmer winter climate might be of help to his health. He recently returned to Tonopah where he died at his home.
