PREFACE

In January 1990, I was conducting oral history interviews with several long-term residents of Smoky Valley in Nye County, Nevada, for the Nye County Town History Project. During these interviews, a man by the name of Fulton Little Kelsay was occasionally mentioned, usually in the context of Will Berg and his family and the Bergs' ranch, located several miles north of Round Mountain, Nevada. Kelsay, I learned, had become attached to the Berg family during the 1920s and for the most part lived with them until his death in 1945. In the interviews, Kelsay was always mentioned in highly respectful terms; he had the reputation of a hard worker and an excellent man with horses.

At the same time I had the pleasure of interviewing Shirley Ann Berg Lofthouse, the youngest child of Will and Lillian Berg. During the Interview, Lofthouse spoke in loving and admiring terms of the man she knew as "Uncle Little" and informed me that she was in possession of two diaries that Kelsay had kept for a ten-year period, from 1930 through 1941. Upon examining the diaries, I realized they represented an unusual and valuable record of daily life on a Smoky Valley ranch some fifty years ago. Upon appropriate consultation with Stephen T. Bradhurst, Nye County planning consultant, and the Nye County commissioners, including Commissioner Richard L. Carver, it was decided that Kelsay's diaries should be transcribed verbatim, printed, bound, and archived with the oral stories collected under the Nye County Town History Project. In this way, Kelsay's ten-year account of his daily activities in a world that in so many ways no longer exists will be available for the enjoyment and enlightenment of others for generations to come.

At this point, I would like to express my gratitude to the various people who have made the Nye County Town History project a reality. Appreciation goes to Chairman Joe S. Garcia, Jr., Robert N. "Bobby" Revert, and Patricia S. Mankins, the Nye County commissioners who initiated the Nye County Town History Project. Thanks also go to commissioners Richard L. Carver and Barbara J. Raper, who joined Mr. Revert on the board in 1989 and who have continued the project with enthusiastic support. Stephen T. Bradhurst, Jr., planning consultant for Nye County, gave unwavering support and advocacy of the project within Nye County and before the State of Nevada Nuclear Waste Project Office and the United States Department of Energy; both entities provided funds for this project. Thanks are also extended to Mr. Bradhurst for his advice and input regarding the conduct of the research and for constantly serving as a sounding board when methodological problems were worked out. I am also grateful to the residents throughout Nye County and Nevada--too numerous to mention by name--who generously provided assistance and information.

Jared Charney transcribed the diaries and Cynthia Tremblay proofread his work. Jodie Hanson and Jean Charney worked on final proofreading and typesetting of the diaries, and Alice Levine served as editorial consultant, and Jean Stoess provided the title pages. Much deserved thanks are extended to all these persons.

All material for the NCTHP was prepared with the support of the U.S. Department of Energy, Grant No. DE-FG08-89NV10820. However, any opinions, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed herein are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views of DOE.

INTRODUCING FULTON LITTLE KELSAY

Fulton Little Kelsay, the author of these diaries, was born in 1885. Shirley Ann Berg Lofthouse, who speaks about her "Uncle Little" in her oral history, does not know much about Little Kelsay's life before he arrived at the Bergs' ranch in Smoky Valley in 1923. She was told that Kelsay came from the San Francisco area, where he had raised race horses. His family—including two individuals named Lerude and Vassar—had a couple of small ranches in Little Fish Lake Valley, Nye County, Nevada. Photographs in Lofthouse's possession indicate that Kelsay had suffered from infantile paralysis; earlier photos show his twisted legs, and in later ones his legs are much straighter. He had been treated at a facility in Missouri in 1920.

Kelsay arrived at the Berg ranch in 1923 and stayed in Smoky Valley for the rest of his life. His parents moved to the Berg ranch with him and remained there until they died. Little Kelsay, who became a member of the Berg family in all but name, resided on the ranch all year even though the family lived in Round Mountain during the school year. He helped with raising hay and livestock and maintaining the ranch buildings and land. In his diaries, he calls Will Berg his "partner." Kelsay also had his own business, raising horses that he sold to the U.S. Cavalry and to individuals in the Smoky Valley and perhaps farther afield. He was apparently a master at breeding and training horses.

As readers of the diaries will learn, Shirley Ann Berg Lofthouse was born in 1932 and was Uncle Little's delight. Many evenings he was her babysitter while the rest of the family went off to a dance.

This remarkable document chronicles ten years in the life of a man who often lived alone and was frequently lonesome but was loved by, and loved, his adopted family. In his later years, Little Kelsay moved from the Bergs' ranch and lived across the valley on his own ranch at Barker meek, though he continued to live with the Bergs in the wintertime. He died in April 1945 and was buried in Round Mountain.

The reader who is not a long-time resident of the Smoky Valley might be bewildered by the many names Little Kelsay mentions in his diary. Although we cannot supply information on all of them, we will attempt to give a small amount of background on most of the individuals central to the "cast of characters" in these diaries.

Kelsay uses the term "the folks" to refer to the Berg family--Will and Lillian and their children Dan, Georgetta "Getta," William "Bill," Karl "Skook," and Shirley Ann. During the years of the diary the two oldest children married, and Kelsay speaks of their spouses. Dan's wife was Rene Rogers Berg (now Zaval); during this period their son Jim was born. Getta married Lister Farrington, and they had a son, Frank Peewee." Later she remarried; her second husband was Frank Jakowatz.

Other relatives of the Bergs were frequent visitors to the ranch. Little Kelsay mentions Will's brother Karl Berg and Karl's wife Katie (nee Rogers). John "Jack" Berg, another of Will's brothers, is often mentioned; his wife is generally referred to as 'Mrs. Jack,' and their daughter Lucille is mentioned from time to time. Will and his brothers had three sisters--Fannie, Jessie, and Georgetta. They lived in the L.A. area but visited the ranch occasionally. Dick. Williams, Lillian Berg's brother, often visited the ranch with his wife Gertrude. Kelsay refers to them as "Dick and wife."

Area schoolteachers often visited the ranch, where they loved to ride horses. Betty Holts and Florence Huffman (later Ellis) were frequent guests, as was a woman named Marjorie G. Kelsay refers to them either by their first names or as "the teachers."

Of the neighbors who visited the ranch, the members of the Darrough family are often mentioned, particularly Clarence, Larry, Luther, and Travis. Other Darroughs included Arlene, Billy, Dewey, Katie, Lee, and Ray. When Kelsay speaks of "the Springs" he is usually referring to the Darroughs Hot Springs, which was an area gathering place. Among other neighbors were the Rogers--Rene's parents Ben and Grace and her aunts Emma and Katie Rogers Berg and her uncle Harry, as well as her brother Pete and, later, Pete's wife, Mary. After Ben Rogers died, Grace married Bill Farrington. Mr. and Mrs. Goff were neighbors; Mr. Goff sometimes helped out on the ranch, as did Harry Rogers.

Kelsay's an family visited now and then, or wrote or sent presents. They included his sisters Angie, Addle, and Elsie, his brother Gard, and cousins Roscoe Vassar and Lone Lerude. Finally, a friend, Claude Mealman, lived on the ranch with Kelsay for five or six years.

AN APPRECIATION

Readers of the Little Kelsay diaries are treated to a concise account of the activities of one household in northcentral Nevada for a period of ten years in the early 1900s. The adults in the household where Little Kelsay lived were tremendously versatile. Though the men had Bache that they performed on a regular basis (as did the women), when there was another job that needed to be done--whatever it was--whoever was available did it and did it well. The men knew how to cook--not just short-order fare but complicated baking and preserving as well. Kelsay writes with satisfaction of the number of pies he baked on a particular Saturday morning or the number of jars of jam he put up. He also writes matter-of-factly of the participation of the women in the care of the livestock. The diary reader comes to take for granted, as the writer does, the women's expertise in horse riding. Readers begin to get a picture of a group of unusually self-sufficient, talented human beings.

Another memorable aspect of these diaries is the faithful accounting of weather conditions. Little Kelsay did not need to elaborate further than his brief observations to let the reader know the emotional as well as physical effects the weather had on him. In addition to his sensitive notations of facts, the brief diary form provides some unexpected (perhaps unintentional) moments of poetry. My favorite reads: "wind and rain delivered colt." Whether or not the erasing was deliberate, I imagine that in some sense the statement things of Nye County truth--as well as of beauty. And perhaps it was deliberate. Little Kelsay writes of his song, and his attempts to publish it. The reader never learns whether his song was published or, indeed, what his lyrics or music were like. I would like to know. I only know about his other song, which tells of ten years of hard work, some sorrows, some joys.

NOTES ON TRANSCRIPTION

We have taken great care to reproduce Mr. Kelsay's words as accurately as possible. Thus, we follow his spellings (usually accurate, but sometimes idiosyncratic) and punctuation (for instance, sometimes there is a period at the end of a sentence and sometimes there isn't; usually a per name will be capitalized, but occasionally it is not). His handwriting was clear, which of course aided our efforts greatly. We have included a facsimile of one page of Little Kelsay's diary so the reader can see what the actual pages look like. Material in square brackets represents annotations by the transcriber--either illegible words or words that had been scratched out but are still legible.
